The hotly debated Sunday hunting bill (SB 147) in Pennsylvania has officially passed the state Senate by a vote of 36-14 and will now move to the House of Representatives. The bill would empower the Game Commission to regulate Sunday hunting on three Sundays out of the year.

The bill has been amended and passed as such:

- One day of Sunday hunting shall be instituted by the Commission during deer rifle season.
- One day of Sunday hunting shall be instituted by the Commission during deer archery season.
- One day of Sunday hunting shall be instituted by the Commission at their discretion

"I was pleased to work with my colleague Jim Brewster to move this bill forward. Today was a historic vote, as it takes a major step toward increasing recreational opportunities for the thousands of Pennsylvania sportsmen and women who enjoy hunting," said Co-prime sponsor Sen. Laughlin, R-Erie in a news release. "This will remove one of only two 'Blue Laws' remaining in the state of Pennsylvania. You can't hunt and you can't buy a car on Sunday in Pennsylvania."
